

TechIt Question of the Week:

How do you think people will listen to music in the future?

Marcus Howard posted 10/18

In my opinion, people will listen to music from computer chips in their clothing. One reason is that it will be an easy way to listen to music. People won't need to carry MP3 players or even smartphones for music. Small computer chips will be in sunglasses, hats, jackets, and shirts. Another reason is that some of this technology exists already. For example, you can buy sunglasses that play music. If this trend continues, it will be popular in the future. In conclusion, I think people will listen to music in their clothing, and it will be great!
